

With interest declining in foreign news the American public is open to almost any proposition which begins with: "I saw it" — and ends with: "No you didn't."

About a year ago we had the controversy over "flying saucers" considered a first-rate news story on account of the fact that it happened in broad daylight.

Not so heavy, of course, was yesterday's news story on this page about "flying saucers" citizens" seeing a strange ball of fire in the sky Sunday night. This is the more common-place type of yarn: The time: Night-time. The place: The sky. The story: which has been the favorite of the tellers of tall tales ever since the world began.

At Miami, officials of the Navy airport said the ball of fire streaked across the sky and exploded. Field read what the Navy said at Miami and promptly clamped a "restricted" label on the whole proceedings.

Obviously we are still a long way from vindication of the armed forces — but the Navy gets its version of a story on the telephone wires first the Army promptly calls the whole thing top-secret.

They got nothing on me — those four down in Florida. Last night I saw a fire-fly. I can't prove it, of course; but still I'm reasonably sure it was a fire-fly. He drifted around over my yard, turning out his running-lights — but when I threw a flashlight on him he turned 'em back on again.

Reminded me of when I was a youngster on the farm, and on a Summer night I'd see a star fall. I'd say so — but grown-ups merely scoffed: "Lightning-bug."

Everybody says things in the sky at night — but grown-ups are allowed to talk about childish things.

Senate Group Gives Nod to Atlantic Pact

Washington, June 7 — (AP) — The senate foreign relations committee today called for ratification of the North Atlantic pact as the best way to avoid World War Three.

In a formal report to the senate, the committee declared that failure to ratify the pact "would have disastrous consequences abroad."

The committee strongly believed the report said, "that it would be in the best interests of the United States and indeed, the entire world, to sustain and encourage the momentum of confidence that has been building up in Europe by ratifying the treaty at an early date."

The treaty was signed here April 4 by the United States, Canada and ten European nations. It will not become binding on this country until ratified (approved by a two-thirds vote) by the senate.

Frankly pointed out a warning to Russian aggression, the treaty pledges the members to consult and to give each other aid in event of aggression against any one of them.

Senator Connally (D-Tex) announced he will ask for early senate debate on the pact, approved unanimously yesterday by the foreign relations committee.

Connally, the committee chairman, predicted the senate will ratify the alliance overwhelmingly. The present major business before the senate is the administration's labor bill but Connally indicated that debate on it drags out he may suggest that the senate lay aside the bill and consider the treaty.

The committee report said that senate approval of the treaty will not commit the United States to a $1,000,000,000 program for rearmament in Western Europe.

The administration is working on an arms aid program as a follow-up to the treaty.

Some senators have indicated they favor the treaty but are inclined to oppose the arms program.

Yesterday Chambers testified he feared "kidnaping or assassination" when he visited Hiss at his Washington home late in 1952 but he stayed for supper nevertheless.

Judge Kaufman added, however, that he found Chambers' testimony given to the grand jury from last Dec. 6 through Dec. 15 "is substantially consistent" with his testimony given during the trial.

Unemployment in U. S. Hits Post War Peak

Washington, June 7 — (AP) — Unemployment jumped 273,000 in May to a new post war peak of 3,289,000.

The census bureau, reporting this today, commented that "ordinarily unemployment drops between April and May and the increase this year was, therefore, contrary to seasonal expectations."

The new high in unemployment is 68,000 above the previous top reached last February. Unemployment had declined slightly in March and April.

The bureau said that despite the increase in unemployment more people had jobs in May than in any of last year. There was also a rise in employment from April to May.

It said one reason the number of job seekers — outside of farming — rose faster than the number of job opportunities was because school age youths turned out for summer or post graduation work.

Because of the seasonal upswing in farming employment moved up, climbing 875,000 in May to a total of 58,694,000 — slightly above the same point last year.

Farm employment alone increased 1,154,000 in May. Jobs in non-agricultural pursuits dropped 327,000 to a total of 49,720,000.

Jury Entitled to Know All Coplon Case Judge Says

Washington, June 7 — (AP) — Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves ruled today that the jury trying Judith Coplon on espionage charges is entitled to know all about the contents of her purse when she was arrested.

Over the vigorous objection of government prosecutors, Judge Reeves said 12 so-called data slips withheld by the government must be shown to the jury.

He also ruled that the government must make available the full text of many FBI reports found in Miss Coplon's purse he offered.

The prosecutor had insisted that only extracts of the report sufficient to make papers found in Miss Coplon's purse be offered.

After the judge's ruling, John M. Kelley, Jr., a government prosecutor, repeated for the record his objection to the offering of the full FBI reports, as well as the 12 omitted data slips.

"The security of the United States is involved," Kelley said. "Publication of the full reports would not be in the best interest of the United States."

Kelley added, however, that the government "respectfully submits" to the judge's ruling. He handed to the clerk all the papers demanded by Miss Coplon's attorney, Archibald Palmer.

The prosecution bases its case largely on a contention that secret material from FBI files on counter-espionage was in the former justice department worker's purse when she was arrested in New York with Valentine A. Gubitov, a Russian.

The papers, despite Judge Reeves' ruling, were not immediately put in evidence.

Kelley suggested that public inspection of the documents be restricted to the judge, defendant, and counsel.

In a memorandum opinion, Judge Reeves said that to withhold the 12 data slips from the jury would be prejudicial to Miss Coplon.

"As the very action of exclusion itself would carry with it the implication or suggestion that such data slips were so important that there was danger to the country in exposure," he said.

He walked calmly to the gas chamber from death row, nearly a quarter mile away. His hands were bound to his sides with leather straps. The captain of the guard, Louis Snyder, tripped Varga said, "don't, stumble, captain."

Varga spent his final hours in prayer with Father John Ryan, a Catholic priest. Shortly before guards took him from the death row, Varga told the priest: "I am very happy. Father, I never been happier in all my life. I am going home now to mother."

The crime for which Varga was executed was described as the most brutal murder in the state's history.

Varga yesterday belied his reputation as the "Madman." Quiet and pensive, he seemed to have lost all fear of death. He spent his last day saying with Father Ryan, a frequent visitor to death row.

Likely Suspect Questioned in Icebox Slaying

Walnut Ridge, June 7 — (UP) — A 40-year-old farmer described by officers as a "degenerate" was still being questioned today in the deaths of three small children who suffocated in an ice box near here Friday.

Officers said that after a night-long grilling last night, they broke down and said that he had established at the time the children were in the ice box and that he appeared to be "lying and getting nervous."

Officers returned to him again today as their "first real suspect in the bizarre deaths."

Lieut. H. R. Peterson of the Arkansas state police said the investigating officers hoped to meet again tonight or tomorrow to decide if the children were the victims of foul play or of an accident that trapped them in the ice box.

Deputy Sheriff Elmer Etchison said that the farmhand being questioned was the "first real suspect we've had."

Military Doesn't Want to Control Atomic Setup

Washington, June 7 — (AP) — Secretary of Defense Johnson said today the military establishment does not want control of atomic energy developments.

He added in a letter to Chairman McMahon (D-Conn) of the senate-house atomic committee: "I intend to see to it that this attitude is maintained by the military establishment."

McMahon, whose committee is conducting an inquiry into charges by Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) of "incredible mismanagement" against AEC Chairman David E. Lilienthal, had written Johnson observing he had heard reports that "the armed forces are somehow involved" in that investigation.

Colleagues said that if the senate-house atomic committee took him, Hickenlooper may attempt to prove that about a score of persons whose loyalty has been questioned at one time or another are still holding key jobs in the AEC setup.

In addition, they said Hickenlooper probably will try to show that loopholes in security regulations — and lapses in enforcement of the rules — have been such that alert spies could have obtained some vital information.

Adding these together with what he has called "wasteful" administrative practices may sum up Hickenlooper's case of "incredible mismanagement" against Lilienthal as AEC chairman.

The senate-house committee remained split today, however, on whether to let Hickenlooper go ahead with his plan of censure, or to let the committee investigate the case of "incredible mismanagement" against Lilienthal as AEC chairman.

He did that yesterday. He asserted that a man once suspended after an FBI investigation produced a 50-page report containing "serious derogatory information" on him, later was reinstated and aided in drafting a top secret report to the senate-house committee.

Hickenlooper labeled this as "a case of 'wasteful' administration" which disappeared more than a week ago after leaving Hot Springs, continued in southwest Arkansas today.

The craft, occupied by T. C. Elkins, 40, a Curtiss-Wright Company pilot, was designed for the navy, Tex., took off May 26th for Stephenville. It has not been seen since and no radio messages were received after the takeoff.

The search is being led by Elkins' two sons, Joe and Gene, who prepared today to move their headquarters from Prescott to Texarkana. More than 35 planes have been participating, along with volunteers, police, forest rangers and national guardsmen.

Sheriff Bob Baker of Pike county said he would lead a 25-member searching party into an area south-east of Murfreesboro today on the strength of a report that a woman had seen a plane in trouble.

The search has extended from Hot Springs to Bleivins in Hempstead county. It will move southward and westward out of Bleivins today.

The commission will meet a week from today to decide what to do about the order for permanent basis. A public hearing will be held.

The reduction was effective yesterday as an emergency measure. Commission Chairman C. O. Bailey said the reduction was "a necessary step" to save the full allowable from producers with whom they deal. These producers either would have to build a wasteful above-ground storage facilities or the entire top part of the oil be drained off by other wells, Bailey said.

Roanoke Youth to Trial for Slaying June 27

Roanoke, Va., June 7 — (UP) — The trial of Lee Goode Scott, 16-year-old high school wrestler charged with murdering pretty blonde Dana Marie Weaver, today was set for June 27.
 A grand jury yesterday indicted the youth on first degree murder charged with murdering pretty blonde Dana Marie Weaver, whose body was found in a church parish house here May 8.
 Young Scott, a singer in the church choir and an Eagle Scout, was arrested the next day on a tip from an anonymous telephone caller.

He was brought before the grand jury after a preliminary hearing last week in juvenile court.
 Investigators have a statement signed by the youth after a seven hours of questioning, which apparently formed the basis for the grand jury indictment.
 Scott directed officers to a hidden coffee-urn bag which detectives thought might have been used to strangle Dana Marie. But later he steadfastly denied knowledge of the slaying and told his parents he wished officers "would stop questioning me" and making my head hurt.
 A coroner's report showed that the pretty blonde girl died of strangulation, though her head and body was severely bruised and beaten.

I passed around only 17 jackets." He said many of the passengers were afraid to leave the plane and go into the water.

"I stayed till the water was to my knees then dove," he said, adding that at that time over half the passengers still were aboard.

Gilberto Diaz Montanez, 21, of Guaymas, also a passenger, said he heard a "funny noise" from the engines and the plane tended to lose altitude.

"When the plane crashed I jumped and opened an emergency door," he said. "I swam till I reached shallow water. The plane had most of the passengers seated along lateral seats. It had only a few regular seats."

The plane sank within six minutes after the crash. Salvage operations are expected to begin later today.

Capt. D. H. Dexter, in charge of the coast guard base here, said he did not believe more than the 28 known survivors would be found alive.

Search by air and seacraft was pressed.

Twenty-six of the survivors swam to small islands and reefs, and crews of rescue craft braved death in the churning and treacherous seas to pick them off and carry them to the mainland.

Two were plucked from the water.

The plane, enroute to Newark, N. J., via Miami, was operated by Strato Freight, Inc., a charter service with headquarters at Bradley field, near Windsor Locks, Conn.

Capt. Dexter said the plane was unable to return to San Juan airport when the engine trouble developed, and it crash-landed 150 yards off Point Salina. The point is four miles west of here, on the north coast of Puerto Rico.

All available U. S. coast guard, air force, army and navy planes and ships in the vicinity were called into the search for possible survivors, bodies and the exact location of the sunken plane.

Large surface craft could not get in among the dangerous rocks and reefs that dot the sea.

Three coast guard ships and two navy ships were in the immediate vicinity shortly after dawn.

Starts to Work at Once Helps Keep You Feeling Better

Recently a woman wrote: "I took five bottles of SSS this year. Have ceaseless energy. My husband takes SSS every year. He feels it is better to keep his blood in good health than to try repairing it."

An appetizing portion of SSS Tonic before meals does wonders for the blood. This famous medicine builds up low blood strength in men, women and children who have non-organic simple or nutritional anemia. So why wait! SSS Tonic helps Nature work faster when extra help is needed.

Millions of Bottles Sold! Get a bottle of SSS Tonic in the big red box from your drug store. Family size: $2.00; Regular size: $1.25.

More Smiles per Gallon with Dynaflo Drive

White sidewall tires, as illustrated, available at extra cost.

THERE'S the smile when you slip the selector lever into Driving notch—and realize that's all there is to do.

There's the smile when you swing smoothly up to cruising speed without halt or check or break of stride. There's the smile at traffic lights when you halt, wait, then move away with never a thought about shifting.

But the broadest grin of all comes at the end of a long day's drive and you find you've covered more miles more easily. Even your treadle-foot — so likely to become tired and cramped maintaining an even speed in direct-drive cars—appreciates the fluid ease of Dynaflo.

For Dynaflo Drive it's not merely a new transmission. It's a new experience — a new luxury in driving. In ten minutes you are handling it like a veteran — in two days you wouldn't be without it.

Small wonder, then, that Dynaflo is the drive with which all new developments in transmissions are compared.

Not merely "something better," it is something entirely new, the first exciting chapter in a whole new book.

Go learn for yourself how abundantly rich in pleasure every gallon becomes when you have Dynaflo.

Your Buick dealer will be glad to demonstrate—glad to quote delivered prices—glad to talk terms of as fine a deal as you could want.

And you'll find glad surprise in the delivery dates he is now mentioning.

Bradley Plays Here Tonight; Juniors Lose

Bradley comes to Hope tonight
for a game with the Legionaires
starting at 8 o'clock at Fair park.
They are reported to have a fast

The Legion boys will be gunning for a win, having dropped the last two contests here. The probable starter tonight will be Ross or McClendon.

Last night at the Park Edsel

ior Legion but costed hits in an extra inning gave Texarkana a 11-6 victory. It was the opening game of the season for the Hope boys.

The game was tied at the end of the regular 7 innings.

The Legion team goes to Gordon
Wednesday night and will enter tain Gordon here next Monday

ISLAND OF ESCAPE

By Hugh
Lawrence
Nelson

The Story: Stranded by fire and
a dynamite explosion without shelter,
and very little food on Speare Island, eight persons who came to Henry Gough Harding's "New
Eden" face a dreary future. "New Eden" is also a murderer in their midst
who has struck once, possibly twice.

George Bascombe has seized the only rifle and declared himself
"king." He is well prepared for what has happened. Mollie Starling asks to be his "queen" and George says the others can barter necessities from him with food.

By the time Bea reached the shelter again, the bits of smoking
wood had been thrust into the pile of kindling. Mabel and Harding crouched beside it, trying to coax
the red glow into flame.

In a few moments the kindling
pile was blazing and larger pieces
of wood were added.

It was obvious from Sillwell's breath he had bartered for whiskey, too. Even though he had probably lost it on the trail somewhere, with the blizzards of the comforting fire no one mentioned the fact.

"George's got himself a cozy
little establishment down there," Fred said. He looked at Nona and smiled. "Two fires going, and Mollie outside trying to roast a slab of mutton. She doesn't act very pleased."

"How'd he cut up a sheep?"
Bea asked.

"George has a big sheath knife.
George has matches. George is dry and comfortable inside the cave working on the whiskey," Sillwell looked around the circle of faces and put their thoughts into words. "In fact, it looks to me like George was pretty well prepared for what happened."

All that night the fire burned brightly, sizzled occasionally as water leaked through the shelter roof.

At first the fire and the cooking of strips of meat had brought comfort that found expression in talk. There was speculation about rescue. There was planning of beacons. Methods of moving rock from hidden stores were discussed.

All night someone was awake,
a shifting of stiffened bodies. And many trips out into the rain for more fuel with the necessary aftermath of clothes drying.

Dawn was a mere lightening of gloom, a gradually increasing grayness. The rain let up a little but the clouds were lower, rested mostly on Speare Island.

There was little morning talk.
There was silent irritability, lethargy, despondency.

By one they wandered woffully into the mist. Fred Sillwell returned smelling of whiskey, and received glares. No one spoke to him. Henry Harding returned and sat by the fire, poking it aimlessly with a short bit of stick. Nona and Agnes made some effort at washing in rain water dripping from the shelter roof. Mabel came back silently and threw a few halfscorched and half ripened vegetables into the bucket of stew. Bea did her best with her snarled hair without benefit of comb, washed carefully around the grease-covered,
scorched places.

"For heaven's sake!" she blurted at last. "What's the matter with all of us? We've food of sorts, and shelter. De won't starve for a while at least. There's more mutter where I got that. Who'll come with me and help build up a pile of wood so we'll have a beacon
when it clears up?"

"What's the use?" Agnes said.
"Nobody could see it in this kind of weather. Nobody ever comes this way. Nobody'll ever come."
Mr. Harding knew it. You all know it. And what good will it do to go out in this awful rain?"

"It won't do any good to sit here complaining," Bea snapped.
"Oh, for heaven's sake," Nona
said, "go be active and optimistic somewhere else!"

Bea Cosgrove bit back a retort.
She fished a piece of meat from the bucket with a stick. She carried it with her out into the mist of day.

She walked briskly along the trail toward Fisherman's Cove chewing on her meat and tossed the last bit of gristle aside. Movement took some of the stiffness
from her muscles, and the circulation of blood carried away a part of the depression of spirits she had felt which the rest.

A fire burned before the entrance of the cave, but Bea saw neither George Bascombe nor Mollie as she hurried past. Captain Oak had said he would return as soon as possible. Bea wondered if she should believe him, or if his presence in the tunnel that night was a preliminary to the explosion.

Her first sight of the cave told her of the exact truth of Harding's words. Nothing human could live in that broken water. Huge waves swept across the reef with scaro-cely a check and dashed white thunder against the base of the cliff.

There was no sign of any beach.
There was a new wreckage caught
here and there on cliff projections, tossed into the break in the wall
where the trail had led down to sand. Idly, moving cautiously, she poked about in the debris.

"The last of the Gullwing!"
She found a section of splintered rail with a tightly lashed white cotton still in place. She tugged, managed to turn it over so she could read the black lettering of the word "Simpanco" on the white canvas.

She looked quickly again out over the water, found no reassurance there for her fear.
Searched now for bodies among the wreckage. Even when she found none she felt no better.

The clouds opened again in gentle rain. She began retracing her steps slowly. This time when she passed the cave, George Bascombe stood in the entrance while Mollie Starling bent over the cooking fire.

Bea hurried past, did not turn when the man shouted. She was soaking wet, but the rain brought a greater visibility than the mist.
She stood on a rock looked around the island. She shivered.

National Pennant Race Gets Tighter

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

This tightest of all National League pennant races, has everybody going around in circles. Even Ford C. Frick, highly optimistic president of the circuit, never dreamed it would be anything like this.

At the moment, Brooklyn and the New York Giants share first place. St. Louis and Boston are only a half game behind, with the Cards holding third place by .002
percentage points over the Braves.

The Dodgers took advantage of defeats by New York and Boston
yesterday with a 5-1 night game
triumph over Pittsburgh to deadlock the Giants for the top rung.

Don Newcombs, recently brought up from their Montreal farm, pitched the Brooks into the tie.

The Giant Negro righthander, battled a four-hitter against the Bucs. He struck out 11, high for the league this season. A wild pitch in the eighth cost him a shutout.

In the meantime, the Dodgers collected eight hits off loser Bob Chesnes, including a home run by Duke Snider, a triple by Gene Hermanski and doubles by Hermanski and Newcombe himself.

Howie Fox pitched and batted the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-3 victory over the Giants. He not only scored eight hits for his second triumph over the New Yorkers, but singled in what proved to be the winning run in the sixth.

The high flying Cardinals made five victories in their last six road games and 12 out of their last 14 starts by thumping the Braves, 7-3. Two three-run innings
—the sixth and the ninth— did the trick. Enos Slaughter's sixth home run helped. D. Mumber, who needed help from Ted Wilks
in the eighth, was credited with his third victory. The loss was charged to Warren Spahn.

The two scheduled games in the American League resulted in a Detroit losing its undisputed possession of second place, and Cleveland
moving past Chicago into sixth place.
The Tigers were nosed out, 10-9,
by the Boston Red Sox, who overcame a 5-2 deficit with flurries of three runs in the seventh and five in the eighth.
Only a heroic relief job by Ellis
Kinder saved the game for Boston.
He relieved winner Tex Hughson
in the ninth with the Tigers one run behind, men on second and third and nobody out. Kinder walked Johnny Groth purposely to load the bases, and retired the next three batters without allowing a further score.
The Indians, with Manager Lou Boudreau playing third base for the first time since his minor league days, exploded for nine runs in the eighth inning to come from behind and defeat the Philadelphia
Athletics, 11-5.

DOROTHY DIX

Who Marries for Love?

Dear Miss Dix: Will you please settle a controversy by answering the following question: Which Marries More For Love, Men or Women? B. S.

Answer: That is a 604 question that not even Solomon could answer, because people marry for such a variety of reasons, and after the honeymoon is over a large percentage of them spend the balance of their lives wondering why they picked out the one they did for a mate. Of course traditionally, all marriages are love marriages, but, in reality, such is far from being the case. Men and women marry for a hundred different reasons other than being victims of the grand passion.

They marry because they are lonesome. Or they marry for money. Or they marry to keep from being old maids or old bachelors. Or they marry because their mothers have picked out some particular girl or boy as a wife or a husband for them. Or they marry because they want a home and home cooking. Or they marry because some matchmaker has chased them to the altar. The marriage of convenience is a recognized institution in other countries. It is only in this land of the free and easy divorce, that we pretend that every marriage is a love match.

This makes it impossible to decide definitely which of the sexes is the more sentimental and whether more men or more women marry for love. On the face of the matter, it would seem that women are the great lovers, for they are the ones who are supposed to have broken hearts and pine away with a green and yellow melancholy if anything untoward happens to their love lives; while jilted sweethearts and husbands are believed to take their bad luck philosophically and turn their affections to other charms.

Maybe this is true. Maybe not. Certainly women get the most divorces, and whether this proves that wives love their husbands more, or less, then their husbands love them, nobody knows. How much husbands and wives love each other is a secret that only God and the divorce courts know.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My wife and I disagree when I say that if a woman takes care of her children and does all of the housework, without expensive electric appliances, that she will be so tired at night that she will sleep straight through until morning and not stay awake to ask questions as to where her husband has been, and why he stayed out so late.

But my wife claims that a woman should go with her husband some evenings. Will you please tell me where a real he-man can take a woman so they both could enjoy themselves? Also, how can a man with an adult mind enjoy playing games, that she will be so tired at home with a woman who can't talk politics, or sports, or even play cards intelligently?

If a woman is a real woman, she gets her enjoyment out of doing housework and taking care of her children and seeing to it that her husband is happy and contented. This is the way Nature intended it to be.

CHARLES Answer: Well, if Nature intended intelligent, educated women to be nothing but slaves to overbearing, tyrannical, conceited men, then we have improved a lot on the original human pattern. For the species to which you seem to belong has long ago passed into the discard and are only interesting now as museum pieces.

Your ideas about how to treat a wife are so antiquated that they sound as if you were spoofing, but just in case you really mean what you say, it would be interesting to know why you married a woman whom you had neither respect nor affection and whom you only wanted as a cook and baby-tender. Of course, it may come a little cheaper to have wife who needs no good clothes, because she never goes anywhere, but isn't that offset by her being so stupid she doesn't know how to talk or even play a simple game of cards?

Your prehistoric ideas about wives are very interesting, but they won't get you anywhere except to the divorce court nowadays. Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a wife and the mother of two small children, and I have just found out that for three years my husband has had a mistress. Recently the lady love has married, but she still keeps up her relationship with my husband.

My husband claims that she still

Lost Ear in Auto Accident But Gets It Back

Memphis, Tenn., June 7 —(UP)—Rolly Reece, 19 year old filling station worker, who lost his ear in an automobile accident, had it back in place today thanks to surgeons at the scene, and a plastic surgeon.

"Where is this man's ear," was the doctor's question as Reece was taken into emergency yesterday.

State highway patrol radio deputies Milton Siedell and Don Claiborne searched the wreckage of two automobiles and roadside underbrush until they found the severed ear.

It was about a 12-mile run from the scene of the accident to the hospital. The ear was intact but dirty from the grit of the highway. The surgeon grafted it back on with skin taken from Reece's right leg. A relative said that the doctor "thinks the operation will be successful."

loves me and does not want to break up our home. The woman says that she doesn't want to break up her home, but she doesn't want to give up my husband either. Don't you think that the proper thing for us to do would be for the three of us to get together and try to straighten out the mess.

BEWILDERED WIFE Answer: Maybe so, though I can't see how any wife who loved her husband would be willing to settle for a half-time interest in him. When a wife ceases to monopolize her husband's interest and affection, she is bankrupt. She hasn't even a good trading interest in him left.

But, as Brother Jasper used to say, "the world shol'd move," when a husband and a wife and the Other Woman can sit down together and calmly settle their love affairs. No doubt it is the sensible thing to do but it is the death of romance.
